CANTON NEWS.

THE OFFICIALS AND THE PRESS.
A stinging article appears in the Canton Times on an official newspaper, the late Viceroy Shum. The leader begins something like this: "When the difficulties among the Canton-Hankow railway commenced what the officials were afraid of was the native newspapers. 'Squeezers' also were in like manner afraid of its influence. After their fear accumulated and took shape it developed into jealousy. When the jealousy had grown to a head there must be schemes for suppressing the native press, which was at once attempted." etc. There is a long and furious attack, words of exceeding bitterness and keenness are applied to the action of the mandarins, so that no one can wonder that they attempt to suppress what, apparently, must be regarded as a dangerous enemy if it is ranged against them. It is not our purpose to traverse the whole article, but simply to call attention to the fact of the attack and the animus thereof. The writer charges the promoters of the new paper as being nothing better than a clique, which has severely determined to promote their own ends by unworthy means. It avers clearly enough that in order to ensure the success of a paper there must be capital and there must be writers. It asks whence the capital for this official paper comes? It answers that Viceroy Shum found it, and therefore it stands on an unsatisfactory basis. It asks where the writers and the editors are? The reply is that though you call on them they cannot be found. It attacks also the methods by which this new daily is distributed. It states that the officials themselves are interested in the circulation thereof, and that therefore they have ordered that it shall be distributed throughout the country districts. Then it turns round and asks if the people are foolish enough to buy state news at the back and bidding of local officials and thinks that the people to-day are too wide awake to be easily induced to such a stupid act and boldly says that whatever is done along these lines, the officials may as well understand at once that everybody can see through the ruse, and everybody who has the least sense, and what supplies the best news and what guards the well-being of the masses.

THE ALMIGHTY DOLLAR.

A story is told of which the hero, or subject is a Fatsan man. His occupation is that of a rice-huller. Some time ago he married a wife and instead of finding himself happy ever after, thought that he might be happier if he left her and lived with some one else, which he soon proceeded to do. Meanwhile the discarded wife, having to the inevitable, ceased to pay any more attention to her lost husband, but instead, bought some tickets in what is called the "Mountain Ticket" lottery, and was fortunate to win several thousand dollars. As soon as she had won her treasure it was of course noised abroad, and reached the ears of her husband, who, apparently, preferred the old wife with her thousands of dollars, to the new husband without any dollars at all. He therefore came humbly back to his former wife, and asked to be allowed to resume his old position. But the wife was wick awake. She would only receive him back on the condition that he pledged and swore that he would in the future play second fiddle in the house and that the wife should be lord and master. This he at once promised and swore that such should be the relation between them in the future. He has not found this arrangement, however, all honey, for the condition of the compact somehow came to light in the neighborhood and though he lives in a nice house with new furniture, everybody in the street laughs at him as a humped husband, and he is afraid to show his face in the street. It almost appears as if the latter state of the man is worse than the first.

VICEROY CROOK AND REPORTER.

We are not in a position to state what has made it necessary for the issue of a proclamation by the Viceroy on the question of nepotism, but probably there have been those who are trying to palm themselves off as his relatives and in this way to extract money from timid persons. At any rate the Viceroy has issued a proclamation in which he states that in no case and at no time has he been guilty of employing his relatives in official positions and giving them any authority over the people over whom he rules. He has therefore issued stern orders and told all the under officials throughout his jurisdiction that if anyone discovered assuming any relationship to him, and presuming thereon to gain any advantage over the local officials or anyone, such an one is to be at once arrested and brought to his yamen at Canton where he will discover whether he will be able to gain by posing as his relative or not.
